

Social Aspects of Conception and Understanding of Health and Body – Nationalization of Intimacy?

Andreja Barle

Ministry of Education and Sport, Kotnikova 38, SI-1000 Ljubljana, Slovenia, andreja.barle@gov.si

Social relations in modern world are medicalised. Maybe because of that we could speak of psihosomatic society. Concepts of body and health in modern societies reflect changes in understanding intimacy. Even more. In past decades the main role of the state was to ensure the conditions and resources for public health. It seems that the role of state is changing. State is more and more involved in the field which was in the past in domain of intimacy. State becomes an important factor to prescribe appropriate lifestyles. Could we say that state through intervention measures nationalises health?